“This has been the most impactful content development undertaking in the history of the FIFA series”, said JC DaCosta, lead gameplay designer for FIFA Football on Microsoft Windows. “This development has unified the many different teams within the company, and has united the entire FIFA development team. The game has been tuned from start to finish to account for the new sensor data. It’s impossible to be more professional than this.” FIFA 22 for Windows introduces the most refined and perfected gameplay on Windows. The game launches as the most comprehensive version of the FIFA franchise, offering signature gameplay features and game modes, including brand new additions to Season Ticket, Ultimate Team and Quick Manager. Key features include: On-ball intelligence – an increase in AI intelligence on the ball results in the ball adapting to your strengths and weaknesses. A new, enhanced ball physics engine – create a more-dynamic and realistic ball-to-player experience. New ball animation – correct the visual flaws in ball animations used in previous FIFA games. FIFA 22 on Windows is the industry's first game to integrate the WCG cloud, delivering EA Sports' very first cloud-based free features such as, FIFA Ultimate Team, EA Sports The Journey and Ultimate Team draft. FIFA 22 brings a new take on player movement, introducing more movement decision-making across all aspects of the game. While movement decisions were a feature of FIFA 21, our team went a step further to ensure the best player movement decisions possible. Player Decision Making (PDM) is a term used to describe the amount of player intent you see in player decision-making. It has now been brought to the whole team. FIFA 22's PDM has been the most refined in the series. This work allowed us to strike a balance between “look at the ball” and “look at the player”. This has also led to the best player eye-tracking behaviour in the FIFA series. The amount of data gathered has allowed us to help players track the ball, their opponent and also, where to be and when to be there. In addition to the movement improvements, we have also integrated our very first real-time, cloud-based game intelligence, allowing players to dynamically “cloud-think” during a game. “Working with our external data partners at the likes
